MARKET GLUTTED.

T Wharf Dealers Have Lots of Fish on Hand.

Advising Off-Shore Vessels to Bring Trips Here.

The bottom is out of the fresh fish market at Boston this morning. The big receipts of the past few days have not only glutted the market, but the dealers find themselves with lots of fish on their hands and they don't want any more at present if they can help it.

There is very little buying and everything is slow. Practically there is nothing moving. The dealers are offering the off-shore vessels 75 cents per hundred weight for haddock and are not anxious for them at that, as they are advising the off-shore crafts to take their fares to this port. Some of the skippers were holding their haddock for $1.10 per hundred.

Big Run of Herring.

The run of herring in Florida this season is something unusual, and it brings up the question of their disposition. One firm at Sanford recently lifted over 20,000 and later had fully 100,000 in their nets, but could not handle them.
